Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

One of the railroad grants that the last democratic congress proposed to forfeit was the unearned one of the Oregon and California Railroad south of Roseburg. The company now advertises that it is ready—or about ready—to sell said lands. Had the last election gone otherwise the public domain would have been larger by several railroad grants than it now is.

RESPECT FOR LAW.

Under a democratic form of government such as ours, respect for law furnishes the only protection for life or property. To secure the advantages of perfect freedom as to religious belief, we have surrendered the restraining influences, the conservative tendencies, and the power of united effort found in an established church. In the separation of church and state, the state no longer calls upon the church for aid in the support of its sovereignty.

With a general government composed of constantly increasing separate state governments, each within its sphere, independent of the general government, and of each other—with these separate state governments for special purposes, subdivided into local and municipal governments, each to the extent of the power delegated, supreme—we have, in the sentiment of patriotism, love of country, or reverence for a common flag, unsupported by a profound deference and respect for law, the cohesive strength of a rope of sand.

That restraint and obedience which is exacted only by fear, with a free people, can have but little coercive force, and offers but slight assurance of permanent protection. Then, it is not to the law itself, not to "thus it is written," but to that allegiance, that submission, and that fealty, borne only of respect, that the individual citizen can look for protection to the "unalienable rights of life, liberty and the accumulation of property." The key-stone of the arch, that supports the civil fabric, reared by the fathers of the republic, is respect for law. Destroy or remove that, and the whole civil structure sinks to chaotic ruin. Whatever then is calculated to bring the law into disrespect with the people, to that extent endangers the life and property of the individual citizen.

The tendency of modern legislation swayed, controlled and dictated by the self-interest of political leaders, and the selfish greed of corporate wealth, is rapidly breeding contempt for law, and its forms, among the people of the whole country.

A combination of selfish interests, known as the republican party, under the banner that "the end justifies the means," has swept into power and controls the federal government. The boddler and the vote buyer determine our elections and select our law makers. Individual and corporate wealth, quite indifferent to the dangers of the situations, continue to supply money to corrupt the elective franchise, and equally indifferent as to means of success, their hirings are found in both parties. In the spasmodic and factions opposition of the people to such legislation, we see illustrated their deep distrust of themselves, and of each other, and the lamentable growth of lawlessness and sedition. The momentum imparted to a government of the people, by the force of great principles, may contain for a time, but that force will soon be spent, as slowly but surely the confidence of the people in the integrity of their institutions is diminished, and their respect of law destroyed.—Portland World.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A Pennsylvania coal miner died of destitution the other day. Nothing was found on the body but a campaign promise of better times.

Prince Bismarck is said to take more pleasure in recounting the duelling and drinking feats of his student days than in relating any of his later triumphs in the field of statesmanship.

Is John Sherman waiting to see what '92 may have in store for him? Conversation with a friend recently on religious matters he said: "I believe in God, the Almighty. That is as far as I have got."

Col. Boyd Winchester, ex-minister to Switzerland, is in Washington, D. C. There is a report that he helped to elevate the morals of the Swiss during his residence among them by teaching them the fine points of the great American game of draw-poker.

William J. Hilton, a wealthy and miserly merchant of Franklyn, Ky. placed a nail keg containing $30,000 in greenbacks and 4 per cent. government bonds upon a fire a few days ago and laughed joyfully as he saw the flames devour the paper. Family trouble and business' cares had turned his head.

An industrious political student, whose brain-throbs vex the air of the Pacific coast, sends greeting to Postmaster Wamamaker and at the same time takes occasion to suggest to that high-priced official that it takes something besides a willipost-wallapus to run a national post office. Here is food for thought between sermons.

Miss May Fortescue, the English actress who was fortunate enough to obtain $50,000 damages from Lord Cairns in a breach-of-promise trial, some years ago, has just succeeded in winning another case of a similar nature against a Mr. Laurence Henry St. Paul Moore. On this occasion she was content to accept a verdict of $1,500. It is evident, however, that the breaching of Miss Fortescue's affections as a pastime grows cheaper as the time rolls on.

A Kansas editor in drawing a pen sketch of Senator Ingalls, writes: "Mr. Ingalls is not very pretty, his hair is very gray and he is exceedingly thin and would make a good clothes-prop or living illustration of the Dr. Tanner theory. His legs resemble a pair of breech-loading single-barrel guns thrust into gun bags. It is a mystery to us how he manages to carry such a big head full of eighteen-carat brains around on such an emaciated set of underpinnings."

The Rev. Charles Spurgeon, the son of the well-known sensational preacher of London, the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, is evidently something more than "a chip from the old block." He delivered a religious address in this city on Thursday evening which contained some truly original features. He took "Nails" as the subject of his discourse, and used a number of those articles in various stages of straightness, crookedness and brightness as illustrations of human lives. Then with a hidden electric battery to represent the love of the Redeemer he caused the nails to approach and cling to a small steel cross, the whole being symbolic of the religious process he desired to make clear. His father in his palmiest days could not have surpassed this. It is what may be called dramatic realism in the pulpit.—Tr.
